Coming Elections.

In most of the States this is decidedly an off year in politics, nothing of so much moment as a State election occurring in them. But on the theory that "coming events cast their shadows before," and see ing that next year is a Presidential year with all that that involves, there will be enough going on this year to keep up the Unhappily the end of one Presidentia campaign is the beginning of another, and the country is kept on the rack by mances ers of the parties. And unfortunatel for the States of first importance and whose decision is at all in doubt, the pressure from outside is so great that the result is not always an expression of the the popu-lar will. That this is an evil can not be denied, but it is difficult to see how it is to be remedied. It is the price that those States pay for their eminence. Rhode Island led off in April. She i not only a small state, but her sturdy Republicanism gives little hope to the other side. It happened, though, that the versatile Governor of Massachusetts took it into his head to make a little diversion there with the double view to vindica's a client and help his own Presidential aspirations by showing that the sort of thing he represents is spreading in New England, Ex-Governor Sprague was defeated, and Rhode Island remains where she was. As hopeless from another point of view

Colonel Morrow is doing all that Republicans could expect from him, but he has a majority of 35,000 to overcome. Mr. Knott, the hero of Duluth, it a popular man, attractive on the stump and a practical hand-shaker. Mr. Knott's hard fight was in the convention; his election is a matter of form. The Legislature will choose a United States Senator, but that is also a family fight.

Ohio and Iowa come in October. The Ohio contest is well undersood. A full State ticket will be chosen, and the Legislature will elect a United States Senator. Though last year the Democratic nominee got in by 1,559 votes, the Republican party had been hurt by recent liquor legislation, the Prohibitionists gave their own ticket 12,202, and the Greenbuck party had life enough in it to poll 5,345 votes out of a to-tal poll of 632,189. The "Ohio idea" is dead. There is no longer a Greenback question in national politics, and as a local convenience for ambitious men it has about had its day. The Prohibitionists have their ticket in the field as usual, but there seems to be a tacit understanding that it will not be largely voted. The liquor legislation of the past winter has satisfied reasonable men, and it looks as sthough the Republian party will not be whipped-sawed to defeat as it was last year. The tariff question will be made prominent in the campaign, and Ohio, is a tariff State. The Legislature will choose a successor to Senator Pendleton.

In Iowa Governor Sherman is renominated. He holds his position now by a plurality of 37,871; the State is undoubtedly Republican. The situation is somewhat question in national politics, and as a local Republican. The situation is somewhat complicated by the Prohibition question, which the Republicans have taken more advanced ground than many Republicans elsewhere think politic. A candidate for Supreme Judge has been nominated who is understood to hold to the constitutionality of the Prohibition law. Mr. Elam's wound is more serious than was at first supposed. Sunday's Wheeling Register contained a "special" from Cumberland giving an saccount of how a wife of this city caught her husband with a young widow and belaword both with an umbrella. This cit was a law which prohibits dueling under pain of severe punishment. But the law and public sentiment are at variance. Public sentiment not only tolerates the duel, under certain conditions it exacts it, and it always condones in advance any bloodletting that may result from it. Atter what had been said in the State and Whig newspapers would have been without influence in that community.

The duel proves nothing, but that makes no difference. It was the old custom

Take this article for instance, "Moonlight Rambles," which appeared in the mammoth Sunday edition of the Enterprise of Sunday, July first, seventeen hundred and eighty-three (1783.) It has the ring of true merit in it. It is true my daughter about sixteen, who reads for me since my eye sight has failed, stopped several times and I had to urge her to proceed, which she very reluctantly did.
